A Farm Boy's Memories of 100 Years Ago XIII

Among his multifarious enterprises Father's Uncle Ed Hammond ran a small country store. It wasn't a full-fledged old-fashioned country general store, for it dealt in few food products. But it carried a line of fundamental dry goods necessities--cloth of all description, essentials for sewing and dressmaking, a few men's outdoor coats, etc. Along one shelf stood large jars of hard candy and such like imperishables so popular then. These and a few other articles --coils of rope, harness materials and tools-- made up the stock; and of course, supplied by Uncle Ed's wholesale slaughtering business,

Donald C. Jason, editor, publisher

The business was an old one. It had been run by Father's father, by Father's grandfather, Capt. Seth Mendell, from 1815 to the mid 1830's, and, judging from Nathaniel Hammond's ledgers, by Nathaniel and his father Enoch Hammond from the time of the Revolution. The building was as old as the business. It stood square at the corner of the Neck Road and the New Bedford Road; in fact, its site was probably under the southerly lane of the Route 6 of today. In design, it was unusual, being two and half stories tall but only one room square. Arthur Hammond finally sold it in the early 1930's, when it was moved a few hundred yards down the Neck Road and placed on a foundation on the left hand side of the road where it still stands, now used as a dwelling house.

Before Uncle Arthur sold the building, he searched among the timbers above the second story ceiling, and there he found a small wooden box containing papers which proved to be a bundle of receipted bills of Capt. Seth Mendell back in the 1820's and '30's. Among other things, these bills indicate that Capt. Seth carried on a much more extensive business than just store trade. For instance, among bills for miscellaneous articles there are quite a few from the newly formed Mattapoisett Wharf Co. for "whorfage, storage, and haulage for 500 bricks," and other building materials which Capt. Seth im-

Although by the time Father came along, the vicinity about the Herring Weir had long ceased being the center of the village, still it was a busy place most of the time. The two Town mills--the saw mill and the grist mill--operated regularly (except when drouth conditions silenced the water wheels) filling the air with the scraping and rasping of the old up-and-down saw at the saw mill and the rumbling and deep-throated rasping of the huge grist mill-stones.

At the saw mill yard, horses and oxen hauled in logging gear carrying piles of logs. Two-horse teams carried off timber and boards. Father spoke often of the long pile of slabs that ran leaning and careening along the south side of the road all the way from the mill up to the present Reservation Road. Every day men rode or drove into the grist mill yard with bags of corn and a variety of grain to be ground into meal. While waiting they passed the time of day or walked over to the saw mill and chewed the fat with the teamsters and the sawyers. The grist mill operated until the early years of this century. Joe Mendes told me just this summer he remembers as a boy taking corn and grain to be ground at the old mill.

It was at the saw mill that Father used to see Marshall Howes, who lived just up the River Road. Marshall was one of those men possessed of tremendous strength. Father used to tell of seeing three men trying to lift a large log, when Mr. Howes would stride forward, knock the men to one side, and with no apparent extra effort, lift the log onto the saw carriage. These men are few and far between at any time, but there probably were a few more per capita in the days before machinery. Those townspeople who remember Mr. Everett Stetson can recall his prodigious strength. And there is at least one such man in town today.

Uncle Ed Hammond also ran an ice business, and one of the busiest times at the Herring Weir were the days in January

"When the days begin to lengthen
And the cold begins to strengthen,"

when the ice on the river-pond froze to a foot or more thick. Then Father watched of a Saturday the horses, shoed with extra long, sharp calks, draw the marking drag across the ice, watched the men saw along the marks, watched others saw it into long slabs, watched still others, muffled in coats and scarves, pole the slabs along the dark channel through the ice to the slide leading up to the ramps entering the building at different levels, and gazed at the ingeneous system of wire and wheels and pulleys pull the slabs of ice up and into the building. The walls were double and filled with sawdust to insulate the ice until summer was over, and the men inside insulated the layers of ice with more sawdust.

Before the ice was cut, or later after the river-pond had frozen over again, Father and the neighboring children went skating. One of his happy memories was skating on winter nights dark except for the shine of ultra-bright stars, evenings when the thermometer plunged for zero, evenings when the ice was black, the banks under the overhanging bushes were black, and even the star-shine reflecting from the ice seemed black. But overriding in his memory the excitement of the speeding through the darkness and cold, was the most vivid memory of all--the deep, terrifying rumble of the ice freezing harder in the bitter cold. All of us have heard on a pond the sharp rumble as the ice, contracting in the frigid cold, cracks across the pond. But Father heard the deep rumble begin cracking at the Herring Weir, increase to thunder as it raced up the river echoing and re-echoing between the banks, up under the Arch Bridge, up, up along the pastures a half mile away, up beyond the present pumping station, finally to be lost in vague echoes in the blackness far, far up the river.

ODOR SOURCE IS ALGAE

The powerful odor which became evident at the flood tide in Mattapoisett village has dissipated. Mr. Dennis Sylvia of the Mattapoisett Board of Health reports that the cause of this stink is the great increase of algae which is collecting along the inner harbor in low water. He said that the problem is not unique to this harbor but is now troubling residents all along the eastern seaboard. This micor sea animal is cast up on the beach at flood tide and lies there under the sun until the powerful odor is generated. So far, according to Mr. Sylvia, no method of solution has been developed. Last year the entrance to the eel pond was dredged because it was thought that this might be the source of the smell. However, new State reports have now made it clear that the algae are to blame, Mr. Sylvia said.

NED'S POINT TRANSFORMATION

If you have not noticed the great difference at Ned's Point's Veterans' Memorial Park, then you haven't visited the area recently. At the beginning of the summer, open barrels blown over the wind and pushed over by animals made the park a littered mess. Mattapoisett Selectmen recognized the problem and took steps to have the area cleaned regularly and installed covered barrels. The resulting transformation has been startling. No longer does anyone have to hesitate to take a guest to the lighthouse to enjoy a cookout. It is now a credit to the town, a clean and enjoyable park.

BAND CONCERT ENJOYED

The residents of the Mattapoisett Nursing Home have been enjoying the Wednesday night band concerts at Mattapoisett wharf. The elderly people have been brought to the wharf by Mrs. Norman Turcotte and by volunteers from the Congregational Church Couples Club. It has been a very enjoyable diversion for the patients.

BAND CONCERT NUISANCE

The members of the band have had to play under conditions which should be improved at once. We have been asked by several people to ask parents to see that youngsters behave at the concerts. Small boys have been regularly throwing rubbish onto the players on the stand, and this is spoiling the concert for the musicians and, if not stopped, will spoil the concert for everyone. The band has had good weather through August and has played very well for us. Certainly the least that can be done to show appreciation is to make conditions more pleasant for them. Parents are requested to see that their children behave themselves at the concert.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

As the contracted rubbish and garbage collector for the town of Mattapoisett, I feel that I must answer the recent "Letter to the Editor" in your newspaper. This criticism is really unjustifiable for the following reasons:

First, Wednesdays and Thursdays are the rubbish collection days, and on Wednesday, 3 men collect from 7:00 A.M. to 6:00 P.M. This day, the route covered is from Main Street to the Marion line. On Thursday, 2 men collect from 7:00 A.M. to 7:00 P.M., covering the remainder of the town. The third man on Thursdays is out on the garbage collection detail which is

With the funds available, the increasing number of households, the emergency absences of regular help (which necessitates using temporary "unfamiliar" help), and little or no cooperation from a minority of the taxpayers who complain the loudest, I and my men are doing the best job that is humanly possible under the conditions.

In answer to the infested and unclean garbage containers problem, disinfectant is not necessary; merely a hosing out or washing out of the containers periodically. Incidentally, this disinfectant is poisonous to the hogs who eat this garbage.

Also, all newspapers should be tied, not thrown in a pile on the sidewalk and rubbish barrels should be securely covered, not open and overflowing with papers.

Together we can make Mattapoisett a clean town, but I need your cooperation and help as you need mine. Thank you.
